

Training and Job Creation

Field and online training for medical response and economic recovery

Training services and job creation are essential elements to recovery, for both medical relief and economic development. We have extensive experience providing training and local job creation in nearly all of our projects. The types of training have ranged from exercises for military personnel, to medical seminars for field conditions, to the employment of local labor for construction, physical labor, and related infrastructure-building tasks. Over the past 8-years in the medical specialty alone, we have trained over: 1,500 anesthesiologists, nurses, and medical engineers; 1,200 field responders for decontamination; and 400 military medical regimens. We also organize conferences on emergency and disaster preparedness systems, with over 1,200 people participating over the past 14 years.

Our services also extend into the virtual world, and we have developed scalable systems for online training.

Brondolo Associates can provide immediate information on these and other disaster services.
